ATLANTA, GEORGIA, MAY 10 (UPI) --

A speeding motorist tossed a chemically-tipped metal dart into the cheek of an Atlanta patrolman last night and fled, leaving the stunned policeman behind. Police said the dart was believed treated with Nicotine Alkaloid, an extremely dangerous drug which sometimes is used in small amounts for stunning animals. An amount of the chemical and a number of darts and strings for administering the fluid were stolen Friday night from the Palmer Chemical and Equipment Company here.

The chemical sometimes is fired from guns into particularly dangerous animals to stun them so they can be handled. Policeman E. A. Clements said he pulled up on the right side of the later model automobile at an intersection after chasing the motorist at speeds up to 60 miles per hour in downtown Atlanta. "He raised his right hand and I felt a sting in my left cheek," Clements said. "Something hit me like a ton of bricks and I blacked out." Clements regained consciousness a short time later; he was slumped over in the front seat of his automobile which had run up onto the curb.

Frank Brickley, an official at the chemical company from which the drug was apparently stolen, said the motorists either had an expert knowledge of the drug or was extremely lucky. "If it is not administered in proper amounts," Brickley said, "the drug can be very dangerous." Doctors at the emergency room at Grady Hospital removed a sliver of metal from Clements left cheek. He apparently suffered no after-effects.

President Kennedy told the nations broadcasters today the essence of free communications in a free world is that "our failures as well as our successes must be broadcast to the world." The President surprised the opening session of the 39th annual convention of the National Association of Broadcasters in Washington by bringing with him Astronaut Alan Shepard, Jr. and Mrs. Shepard. Mr. Kennedy had a special word of greeting for delegates to the Inter-American Broadcasting Association which also is holding a convention in Washington. He said, "I would like to express our fraternal feeling to these delegates and to assure them that we intend to maintain freedom in this hemisphere and support the cause of freedom throughout the world." To the broadcasting industry generally, Mr. Kennedy said, "there is no means of communication as significant as that in which you are involved. NEW YORK, MAY 10 (UPI) --

In the first two weeks after the Cuban Invasion the Castro government arrested 200,000 persons and condemned thousands of them to conditions reminiscent of the "Black Hole of Calcutta," according to the New York Herald Tribune. The Herald Tribune's dispatch -- which the newspaper described as the "first authoritative and detailed account of Fidel Castro's reign of terror to reach United Nations sources" -- paints a stark picture of prisoners jammed into standing-room-only space and sprayed with DDT in moats, of women suffering miscarriages in crowded prison cells.

At Cabana, a fort near Havana's Morro Castle, a consular official reported seeing sixty persons shot. This official added that the director of the Cabana Prison personally shot 17 of the prisoners. The DDT spraying incident occurred in Morro Castle itself, according to the Herald Tribune. Because the prison there was unable to accommodate the thousands of prisoners rounded up by Castro's Militia, an overflow of several thousands was herded into the castle moat. The moat was so crowded that the prisoners were unable to lie down, there were no sanitary facilities. Twice a day the Militia sprayed the prisoners in the moat with DDT.

At Havana's Blanquita Theater, where thousands of additional prisoners were held, sanitary facilities were limited to three theater toilets. Prisoners were fed only twice in six days. When the prisoners threatened to riot against these conditions, guards paraded fierce dogs across the theater stage, according to information which the Herald Tribune said had reached United Nations sources here. At the Principe Prison in Havana, the reports continued, 86 women were crowded into one room. Two pregnant women among them suffered miscarriages.

Of the two-hundred-thousand arrested, about 50,000 were picked up in Havana alone, according to the reports reaching here. An undetermined number of the 600 United States citizens still in Cuba were under arrest, as were many other foreigners, including nationals of Latin American countries and from Europe.
